case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the generator may operate as a single unit not connected to a distribution line. The subcombination has separate utility such as controlling power distribution working with multiple engine generator units.

4. Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the turbo generator may be controlled by speed. The subcombination has separate utility such as controlling power distribution working with multiple engine generator units.

5. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

6. A telephone call was made to Borealis Technical Limited on January 31, 2001 to request an oral election to the above restriction requirement, but did not result in an election being made.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement is traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
